

Small Companies Fund

Monthly Report

January 2010

Portfolio Performance and Strategy

The Small Ordinaries Accumulation Index in January fell 7.43%, reversing the positive trend from the previous two months. The Eley Griffiths Group Small Companies Fund underperformed the index by 0.22%. January started positively with the market pushing higher on lower volumes and news flow. This changed mid month as investors sold profit laden stocks (namely resource and energy companies) as concern surfaced that China might slow its economy faster than expected to control inflation. It seems that this and the rising US$ likely spurred offshore 'fast money' accounts to exit profitable positions forcing prices lower. Also notable were a number of companies pre reporting their December half results with varying commentaries on the near term outlook. The other main focus for investors in January is the upcoming reporting season with analysts and investors alike waiting to see how their companies have performed during a challenging period. The RBA did not meet in January but surprised the market by keeping rates on hold in early February at 3.75% (all analysts were expecting another 0.25% increase). The Australian Dollar was also volatile throughout the month, climbing to above US$0.93 before finishing just off its lows at US$0.884 by month end. The economic data continued to strengthen during January with building approvals and retail sales numbers pushing higher. Our cash levels closed January at around 3.5%.
